An excellent Insight into Spain in the late 1930s and early 1940s

By Traveller

Through the character of a poor madridlenian seamstress Maria Duenas conjures up a wonderful story that takes the reader from war-torn Madrid to the Spanish Protectorate in Tetuan, back to Madrid post-war , and to Lisbon.

Sira Quiroga, the main character, leaves Madrid with her lover only to be abandoned, pregnant and penniless in Tangiers but rebuilds her life in Tetuan as a skilled seamstress providing haut couture to expatriates and the German community. Slowly she is drawn into the world of British espionage as they try to maintain the neutrality of Spain against an increasingly powerful German influence. Sira with her contacts to high society in Madrid and her German customers, at considerable risk to herself, becomes actively involved in providing detailed information to the head of British Intelligence in Madrid.

Much of the book draws on detail from the life of Rosalinda Fox and the Spanish Minister for Foreign Affairs, Juan Luis Beigbeder and the author successfully weaves a mix of fact and fiction to create a fascinating story.

The seamstress

By jenny clegg

This was a marvelous book. I didn't want it to end. I loved the way the author wove historical facts into the storyline. My husband is reading it at the moment and enjoying it just as much
